can be conveniently used for permanent fixed, and depositors will not feel uncompanied in withdrawing it if they face look-up by suspicious officials of the company or bank. Thus far no such incidents have occurred, and those which will doubtless be established will all be learnt something from the experience of the last fortnight. That some of the sound institutions will be won up is not matter for regret, for they were a loss and menace to the country. And their removal, moreover, will tend to lessen the competition among the rest.
